

Agents Report:

Why good ole 'Uncle Joe' is NOT working in your best interests!

OK, you're a good player and you have a crack at making it Big! If you use a family member or friend as your agent, they may have the very best intentions, but they simply do not have the resources or knowledge that a professional sports agent has.

Does 'Uncle Joe' really know which team is going to be the best option for your abilities? Or, does he even know who to contact to get you a try out?

Let's face it, there is a lot at stake here! Realistically, this year may be your best shot at the Big Time! Do you really want to give that chance to someone who isn't a professional? I think not...

According to author and experienced sports agent/advisor Graham Howarth, even a great player may be bypassed because the negotiators have unrealistic expectations. Graham works for the benefit of his clients with honesty, and integrity but he also knows the rules of the game. Being involved in sports for his entire life, Graham has gained a long list of contacts which is something that 'Uncle Joe' just doesn't have.

A professional sports agent also gets you appropriate try outs, negotiates a contract and all the contract details, works on endorsement deals, and provides some much needed advice. They're there for you and work on your behalf with your best interests in mind. They're there for you and work on your behalf with your best interests in mind.

Does a good sports agent take in all clients?

The answer is 'no'. Graham says he wants more than just stats and credentials. The athletes should have a positive attitude, a strong drive, and an open mindset. Ability is important but there are a lot of good players out there. To get noticed by the teams that matter, you have to stand out and it's your personality that makes it happen.

Email Graham Howarth or check out his website

Are you interested in getting noticed? Improving your good traits and really improving your not-so-good traits will help you in everything you do.

Call or email for your free consultation and blow the competition away!